Yesterday Once More: Performer Steven SanSoucie Relives the 60s, 70s, and 80s
Through Pop, Disco, and Rock Classics

FRAMINGHAM, MA—August 1, 2011. Local area performer Steven SanSoucie is back with microphone in hand, ready to move us again with his new music revue, Yesterday Once More.

SanSoucie, a favorite of audiences throughout New England, often looks to chart toppers of the past decades for inspiration, and this time is no different. His newest show is a carefree jaunt through rock, disco, and pop classics of the 60s, 70s, and 80s. The song list features songs ranging from Neil Sedaka to Barry Manilow, The Spinners to Pat Benetar, as well as a few of SanSoucie's own favorites too, like Elton John, Stevie Wonder, Carpenters and of course, Donna Summer.

"Pop music of the 60s and 70s has been like a best friend and therapist all in one," says SanSoucie. "These songs have made me who I am today."

As he has with past shows, SanSoucie will punctuate his numbers with musings on his musical inspirations, including what has become a life-long struggle in trying to figure out the real meaning behind the lyrics of "MacArthur Park."

Although SanSoucie is backed by a four piece band, the singer plans for an intimate evening.....so picture sitting with some friends in your living room, and a very fun-loving guy with a microphone just happen to show up. Groovy!

SanSoucie takes the stage with husband Rob Wendel, who will once again accompany him as music arranger and keyboardist. Does the pairing ever get old? The answer is a resounding NO.

"Performing together is such an amazing privilege," says SanSoucie. "Not many married couples get the opportunity to share a profession, let alone a musical one, and we have such a blast bringing it to the stage."

SanSoucie and Wendel will also be accompanied by their tried-and-true musical combo of Randy Cloutier on percussion, Lee Whalen on bass, and Kevin Coyne on guitar.

The show is for all ages of music lovers....going back to the 60s, 70s & 80s or "Outta Sight" to "Awesome"!
